

Matt Traver

Matt Traver is a British-American climber and adventurer originally from Hong Kong. He has organised and lead expeditions to remote and little-explored areas including the Dragon's Horns West Face on Tioman Island, Malaysia where he climbed a 1300ft new route on the imposing jungle spire. Ultimately he is most inspired by seeking out the little-known, under-explored and forgotten corners of the world.

About Matt:

In 2012 and with a team of four he ventured to a remote region within the Arctic Circle of East Greenland to attempt first ascents in a previously unvisited area. In the same year he also completed a two week horse riding journey through western Mongolia documenting the lives of the Kazakh nomads and ancient practice of eagle hunting.

Key Note Topics:

- Exploring the remote and unknown.
- Expedition planning, logistics and management.
- Discovering the authentic self and the pursuit of meaning.

Testimonials:

“Matthew transported us to the depths of Mongolia holding the audience captivated with tales of his adventure.”

Chris Martin, Tales of Adventure.
